

NURSE REFUSES TO LEAVE ILL— TAKEN BY ENEMIES

By William G. Soper, United Press

Monastir, Nov. 15 (Delayed).—Lady Ralph Paget, who was captured by the Bulgarians at Uskub, made one of the supreme sacrifices of the world war. Rather than desert the wounded Serbians entrusted to her care, she spurned an opportunity to escape and with practically her entire hospital staff voluntarily fell into the hands of her country's enemies.

The story became known here today with the arrival from Nish of Edward Stuart, head of the American sanitary commission, who left the Serbian capital two days before its fall. Stuart told a dramatic story of Sir Ralph Paget's attempt to save his wife from the Bulgars while the Bulgarian advance guard was within a few miles of the town.

"Sir Ralph was at Nish when he learned that Uskub was about to fall," said Stuart. "He obtained a big automobile, stocked it with some provisions and made a wild dash over the rough roads to Uskub to save Lady Paget, who was in charge of a large hospital there.

"His car sped to the hospital just three hours before the Bulgarians actually entered the town. The last of the Serbian soldiers were leaving and civilians were fleeing.

"He found Lady Paget in one of the wards personally directing the care of the wounded and urged her to go with him without a moment's delay. She refused. Sir Ralph, almost in tears, begged her to leave at once, but she gathered her staff together in the hospital office and told her husband:

"We owe too much to these men here under our care to leave them now when they most need us."

"Sir Ralph kissed her good-bye and sped back to Nish."

Two hundred Austrian prisoners who were abandoned by the Serbs when they retreated from Uskub are doing service as attendants and nurses at the Uskub hospital under Lady Paget's direction, Stuart said. Among the doctors who elected to remain with Lady Paget was Dr. Catherine Travi of Canada and the following American doctors:

S. H. Osborne, C. E. Fox, T. E. Cornelius, B. A. Ohr and Harry Plotz and five Columbia university men, Elmer Childs, Douglas Dold, Elliot Dold, Arnold Bell and a man named Little.

A BUNCH OF COPS NEAR FROZE AND SPEAKERS KEPT WARM

The weekly "riot" in Mandel Bros.' Holden ct. failed to come off last night. But not through any fault of the police. They were ready for something to happen, but Geo. Koop and his speakers failed to show up.

A chilly wind whistled through the court and the patrolmen and detectives took advantage of the hospitality of a group of department store watchmen—who were ready to assist them in every way possible—to step inside the shelter of Carson-Pirie's and Mandel Bros.' stores.

One each corner of Madison and State were stationed three uniformed policemen. Standing inside Carson Pirie's doorway was a group of detectives. Still others hung around the front of Mandel Bros.

There was another detail of police stationed at State and Harrison, where Koop generally got his crowd to go to Holden ct. There was no speaking last night.

STREET CAR MEN ELECT

The big union of street car men, Div. 241, elects officers tomorrow and 9,000 men ballot. The general officers have no opposition for reelection, though there are races between executive board candidates at various stations.

Snow will be here again soon. But we can understand snow. In other words, it is the only weather in which we can see the drift.
